

Here's a compilation of websites that would be useful for a student of architecture in Atlanta and Georgia:

1. American Institute of Architects (AIA): <https://www.aia.org/> The national organization for architects, offering resources, events, and professional development opportunities.
2. AIA Georgia (AIAGA): <https://www.aiaga.org/> The Georgia chapter of the American Institute of Architects, providing local resources and networking opportunities.
3. Institute of Classical Architecture & Art (ICAA): <https://www.classicist.org/> A nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting classical architecture and traditional building methods.
4. ICAA Southeast Chapter: <https://www.classicist-se.org/> The Southeast chapter of the Institute of Classical Architecture & Art, offering regional events and education programs.
5. National Organization of Minority Architects (NOMA): <https://www.noma.net/> Advocates for diversity within the architecture profession and supports minority architects and students.
6. Georgia Tech School of Architecture: <https://arch.gatech.edu/> The official website for the School of Architecture at the Georgia Institute of Technology.
7. Kennesaw State University Department of Architecture: <https://cacm.kennesaw.edu/architecture/> The official website for the Department of Architecture at Kennesaw State University.
8. Georgia Association of Architects (GAA): <http://www.aiaga.org/> A professional organization representing architects and architecture students in Georgia.
9. Georgia Building Authority: <https://gba.georgia.gov/> Responsible for the planning and development of state-owned facilities in Georgia.
10. Georgia Trust for Historic Preservation: <https://www.georgiatruster.org/> A nonprofit organization dedicated to preserving Georgia's historic buildings and sites.
11. Atlanta Urban Design Commission: <https://www.atlantaga.gov/government/planning-development/office-of-design/urban-design-commission> Responsible for promoting and regulating good urban design practices in the city of Atlanta.
12. Georgia Planning Association (GPA): <https://georgiaplanning.org/> A professional organization focused on urban planning, which can be relevant for architecture students.
13. Georgia State Board of Architects and Interior Designers: <https://sos.ga.gov/index.php/licensing/plb/9> The licensing board responsible for regulating architects in Georgia.

14. Atlanta History Center: <https://www.atlantahistorycenter.com/> Provides insights into the architectural history of Atlanta and Georgia.
15. Atlanta Preservation Center: <https://atlantapreservationcenter.com/> Offers information on preserving and protecting historic architecture in Atlanta.

These websites should provide a good range of information and resources for a student of architecture in Atlanta and Georgia. Whether you're looking for professional organizations, educational institutions, historical preservation resources, or regulatory bodies, these websites should be valuable for your studies and career in architecture.

Source: ChatGPT \(openai.com\)